Mangione would face a mandatory sentence of life without the possibility of parole if convicted on all counts. On Wednesday, media reports claimed that Mangione will also face federal charges in addition to the state murder indictment. The federal case—which is being brought by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York—could potentially allow prosecutors to seek the death penalty, according to The New York Times.

He could be arraigned in New York state court as early as Thursday afternoon or Friday.
